

Tips for EndNote Web

EndNote Web and Cite While You Write™ help researchers generate, gather, manage, store, and share bibliographies.

Retrieve your saved EndNote Web citations:

- Go to myendnoteweb.com

Add articles to EndNote Web from the library's databases

If using your own computer: Turn off the popup blocker, or be ready to allow popups for EndNote Web and the databases.

- On the library website at lfc.edu/library, in the central search box, next to the red box, click Articles/Databases, select a database, and enter search terms, then follow the steps below.
 - EBSCO databases: Click the blue or yellow folder icon to put your article(s) in the folder; click the folder icon at the top of the screen, select all, click Export, and click Save.
 - Web of Science database: Click the title of an article or check the box next to the title, click the Save to EndNote online button, select Save to EndNote online, and then click Send.
 - For other databases . . .
 - 1) Install Cite While You Write, which includes (currently for Windows PCs only) the direct citation export plugin.
Note: Complete these steps just once on your laptop. (This step is already done for Windows in the library labs.)
 1. Login to myendnoteweb.com
 2. In the dark gray toolbar, click Downloads.
 3. Install Cite While You Write™ which includes software to directly download citations into EndNote on PCs.
 4. Drag the Capture Reference icon to your browser's bookmark toolbar.
 - 2) Export articles to EndNote Web
 - Google Scholar (on a PC):
 1. In the search result list, under the article, click Cite and then select RefMan and click OK.
 2. Login with your EndNote Web login (password includes a special character) and click OK.
 - Google Scholar (on a Mac):
 1. In the search result list, under the article, click Cite and then select RefMan.
 2. In EndNote Web, select Collect and then select Import References.
 - JSTOR: Under Cite This Item, select Export a RIS file. Login to myendnoteweb.com, choose Collect, and then Import References. Optional method: Click on Capture Reference bookmark.
 - LexisNexis: Click the book icon in the upper right of the window, then select "Download Bibliographic Data for other generators, e.g. EndNote," and click the red Export button.
 - ProQuest (Chicago Tribune, Philosopher's Index): In the list of search results, check boxes, or click on an article. Click Save and select Export/Save, then select RIS, and click the Continue button.
 - PubMed: Click the title of the article or check boxes for articles, click Send To and select Citation Manager, click Create File, open the file, and then click OK.
 - Project MUSE: In the list of search results, below the article(s) click Save Citation, at the top left click Saved Citations, and click Export to EndNote.
 - BioOne: Check the box(es), click Download to Citation Manager, and then click the Download Citation Data button.
 - Literary Sources: Check the folder next to the article, and then click My Folder (near the top of the page) or click on a title. Now click Citation Tools and click the EndNote button.
 - NewsBank (Chicago Sun Times, etc): Click on an article, click Download Citation as File

Add books to EndNote Web:

1. Login to myendnoteweb.com and click the Collect tab to select Online Search
2. Select: I-Share, Lake Forest Coll, WorldCat, or Library of Congress, and then click the Connect button.
3. Enter the main title of the book and/or the author or year of publication, selecting the corresponding field.
4. Click the Search button.
5. Check the box next to the book you are citing.
6. At the top of the list of results, click the "Add to group..." arrow and make a selection.

Add websites to EndNote Web:

If using your own computer: First login to myendnoteweb.com, then, in the dark gray toolbar, click Downloads, and drag the Capture Reference icon into your Favorites or Bookmarks toolbar.

1. On the web page, in the toolbar, click the EndNote "Capture Reference" icon... or: In EndNote Web mouse over the Collect tab and click New Reference, and for ReferenceType, select Web Page
2. Enter data into the fields using the date format for the citation style you are going to be using.
 - Use the Series Title field for a website title and the Title field for the title of the web page
 - In the Optional Fields, use the Last Update Date field for the month and day of the last update
3. Click the Save button.

To see your most recently added references

1. Click the My References tab
2. Change the Sort by option to: Added to Library – newest to oldest

Create a bibliography from your imported references

1. Mouse over the Format tab
 2. Click Bibliography
 3. For References, select either "unfiled," "All References," or the name of the group you have created
 4. For Bibliographic style, select the style your professor recommends
 5. For File format, select RTF (this will make it open in Word; you could also select something else and then copy and paste it into Word)
 6. Click the Save button (if necessary, click to allow popups).
- To make an annotated bibliography...
After each reference:
1. Strike the enter key to create a new paragraph.
 2. Strike the Tab key twice, and then type information about the reference.

To edit or change authors, publishers, dates, remove line breaks or extra spaces, etc.

1. Find the reference in EndNote Web
2. Click the title of the reference (not the author)
Note: the first time you do this, on the right side of the screen, you will need to click Show Empty Fields.
3. Make changes and click the Save button

Use Cite While You Write™ to insert citations and the bibliography into your paper

(If using your own computer, install Cite While You Write™ as directed above)

1. Open your Word document.
On a Mac, the first time: Go to Tools > EndNote > Preferences, select the Applications tab, and select the EndNote Web button.
 2. At the top of the Word window (or in Tools on a Mac), click EndNote Web and login.
 3. Choose the style you will be using.
 4. Go to the end of your document and insert a new page so the bibliography starts on the last page.
 5. Place the cursor in the location where the citation should appear.
(For Chicago Style, now click the References tab and choose Insert Footnote or Insert Endnote.)
 6. With the EndNote tab selected, click the Find Citations button.
 7. Enter the last name of the author or a key word of the title to find the correct citation, and click Insert.
- To add page numbers:
Click on the in-text citation, footnote, or endnote to highlight it, and click the Edit Citations button.

When using Internet Explorer

- Enable the EndNote Capture Add-On!
